Spirit of the Morning Press.

The Intelligencer argues that " Congress cannot by legislative act attaint for treason any person, or class of persons, but it can declare the punishment of tresson, with the restriction that that punishment, as prescribed by law and administered by the courts before which the accused are brought, shall not work corruption of blood or forfeiture of estates, except during the life of the person attainted." The Republican, commenting upon the bill to reorganize the judiciary of this District, says: " It is not, we presume, doubtful that this movement has its origin in objections to the opinions and (perhaps) practices of the persons actually exercising judicial functions here;" and says an easier and better way to get rid of the difficulty, is to change the legislation which brings slavery questions before the courts of this Dis-trict. Slavery is already abolished. Let the epplication of the fugitive-slave law to this Dis-tict be no longer permitted, and it will cease to be of importance what the notions of our judges are about slavery "

THE OPERA TO-NIGHT .- The artistes of the Gotischalk-Brignoli Opera Company have arrived in this city, so there is certain to be no disappointment in the performance to-night. I bey bring with them on this occasion an adequate chorus, and a good orchestra has been secured, and the public may count upon the rendition of the pieces announced with the fullest possible effect. Great interest is felt to hear the American prima donna, Miss Kellogg, whose performances elsewhere have created such a furere. The other musical stars, it will be seen, are all "first-raters."

From our neighbor Metzerott we have the following new music, published by Ditson, of Beston : "Levinia Waltz," by William Withers, it., parler song, "Two Lovers," by Chopin; "Are they Meant but to Deceive me," by Reichardt; "Emma Waltz,"-music by Withers.

From Philp & Solomon we have a sequel to the powerful story of " Paul Ferroll," entitled Adams, John Coffee. "Why Paul Perroll killed his Wife," published in handsome style by Carleton, New York. Those who have read " Paul Ferroll" will need little persussion to follow up with the sequel.

ARBIVAL OF THE SEVENTH NEW YORK REGI MENT -The newspapers of New York and Philadelphia announced the departure from the for mer city of the celebrated military organization known as the Seventh Infantry, under the command of Col. Lefferts. It appears by their state ments that the regiment left New York city at 1 e clock on Monday night. They reached here by the Northern Central Railway, and marched by Cathedral and Eutaw streets to the depot of the Baltimere and Ohio Railroad, on Camden street Upon arriving at that place many of the command supposed they would proceed forthwith to Washington, but they were detained here, and for the present will be quartered at the barracks, near Bellevue Gardens, West Baltimore street. The command musters about 900 muskets, of which 750 come in, the last detachment of 150 being expected bere this morning. The regiment is ac-Graffula, who, as a composer and arranger of band rousic, is most favorable known throughout the

It was nearly dusk when the line reached the elepot. A committee of the Union Relief Association met the principal officers, and after a brief interview the regiment marched into the commodious building of the association and sat down to a good supper, consisting of sliced ham, fresh bread, cheese, hot coffee, &c., and it was regarded lis quite palatable. Upon reaching the depot, listor Gen. Dix, Major Ludlow and Lieut. Barstow sppcared, and the General gave the commanding officers a warm greeting.

The Seventh Regiment wear a uniform almost precisely like that of the Thirteenth Brooklyn, consisting of a grey cassimer coat and pantaloons, mer cap, and the whole trimmed with black cas-The companies moved well, and evinced considerable discipline, but are by no means superior to many other commands which are now in the service of the Federal Government .- Balt.

LATE FROM CORINTH .- We have late advices from Corinth which enables us to state authentically that Beauregard is there and not at Richmond, - hat Sterling Price, of Mo., is alive and well and in command of one of Beauregard's Divisions,-that Corinth is not evacuated,-that Halleck's Army is in a good state of discipline, and that the letter writers have been expelled From the Army as a whole, because it was necespary to get rid of a part of them, (one of the correscondents having been inveigled into communiation with a pretty Tennesses rebel with three brothers in the Confederate Army, and others being imprudent)-and that the day of battle will probably be governed by circumstances connected with the ficet Gen. Mitchell is about fifty miles from Corinth, preventing reinforcements from reaching Beauregard, via the Charleston and Memphis Railroad. We have reason to believe that the numbers in the two armies of Halleck and Beauregard are greatly over-estimated, and that the forces are not very unequal. When Farragut reaches Memphis, it is probable that the Rebels will be compelled to leave their entrenchments, and fight in a fair field and upon some thing like equal terms -N. Y. Express.

BURNING OF THE MERRIMAC .- The rebel Capt Patnell has published a letter explaining this event. He says she was lightened so as to draw only eighteen feet, with which draught the pilots teld him they could carry her up the James river to within forty miles of Richmond, and thus have enabled him to destroy our gunboats, which had gone up the river. After she was ig htened by throwing over a portion of her armament, and thereby rendering her unable to cope with our fleet in Hampton Roads, the pilots re-ported that the winds being westerly, had so diininished the depth of water in James river that the Merriman could not go up. This left no other alternative than to burn her. This is Tatnall's explanation, to be taken for what it is worth. He ascribes the deception of the pilots to their rejuctance to being engaged in a fight.

I Solomon Sturges, the well-known Chicago steamboat man and capitalist, has become insane, and a writ of de lunatico inquirendo has been granted in his case. The Chicago Tribune says: The incipiency of the malady was largely owing to the deep and intense interest which he manifested in the overthrow of the rebellion and the vicejous prosecution of the war. We understand that he will be removed for a time from the scene of his business to an Eastern retreat, and it is hoped that quiet and freedom from mental car-

OUR MILITARY BUDGET.

THE SITUATION A telegram from Harper's Ferry informs us that the rebels under Jackson, after leaving Winchester, bere southwest of the Paris Gap, as though making for Chester's Gap, through which to cross the Blue Ridge. If so, it simply proves that they were even in a greater hurry to escape due punishment than we imagined. Passing through that gap would bring them out into the Piedmont country west of Front Royal, and though comparatively safe from danger of being overtaken in their retreat down along the eastern base of the Ridge, by any troops that can possibly move upon them from the east and south, certainly easily to be intercepted by the prompt movement of other troops from a point where there were more than sufficient to that end, if what must have been the orders from here were carried out. If the commander of the force last referred to is a competent one, the public will soon hear that Jackson has met a wall of Union artillery and bayonets outnumbering his; and, if not able to force him to an instant engagement, quite able to hold him "as in a vice" until troops enough arrive from another direction to gobble him up in an hour. But we repeat, the question whether Jackson is to be intercepted in his retreat, (and he will surely be defeated or captured, if he is intercepted,) must depend solely on the celerity with which the directions to that end from this point have been carried out by the commander of our troops who were in position to effect that object.

CUM GRANO SALIS.

We see no reason to believe the telegraphic stories about the firing of women from houses in Winchester on our troops on their recent retreat from that town. Nor do we place implicit faith in those of the alleged unprovoked barbarity of the rebels practised on Kenly's command. Though they are brutal enough in all conscience, we require more than first telegraphic dispatches to make us swallow those accounts. The people in rebeldom, deceived by lying stories per telegraph and otherwise disseminated, very generally believe that the conduct of our troops to their wounded is quite as reprehensible as these accounts make the conduct of theirs in these cases. All know how unjust the aspersions are upon our gallant troops; and we should therefore recollect that it may not be impossible that their alleged brutality at Front Royal may have been more or less exaggerated.

GEN. BANKS.

The press, without exception as far as we can perceive, unite in awarding to Gen. Banks unstinted praise for the manner in which he recently saved his command from the horde Fremont let loose upon him without giving notice of their movement east. We learn, ere going to press this afternoon, that he (Gen. Banks) is again in Virginia with his command, and take it for granted that he will very shortly again move down the Valley.

NAVAL.

The U. S. steamer Susquebanna, which distinguished herself at the Hatteras Inlet and Port Royal fights, has again been assigned to active duty, and sailed on the 24th for Norfolk, to join Com. Farragut's squadron.

The following is a correct list of her officers, including, it will be seen, the names of some of our Washington beys:

HANOVER COURT HOUSE.

The movement of General Fitz John Porter on Hanover Court House, of which we learn by telegraph to-day, is one of great importance in connection with the main operations before Rich. mond. Its success, which, we apprehend, has been complete, will therefore add new laurels to the brow of that distinguished officer.

NAVY YARD.

The King Philip and Leslie came up yesterday afternoon, after ineffectually attempting to get the Vanderbilt afloat, which had run aground on Budd's flats. The troops were taken off, and hopes were entertained that she would get off when the tide raised.

From Martinsbarg, Va.

BALTIMORE, May 27 -Private accounts from Martinsburg represent that only a few rebel sceuts arrived in town yesterday, and shortly after retired without doing any damage to the town. The indications are that the rebels are retreating to Winchester.

OUR LEFT ON THE CHICKAHOMINY. GENERAL KEYES' HEADQUARTERS, May 24 .-This morning a reconnoissance was made in force upon our left wing, for the purpose of ascertaining the strength of the Rebel troops in the neighborhood of "the Pines," some eight and a half miles distant from Richmond.

The reconnoissance was conducted by Brigadier General Naglee, and consisted of infantry and cavalry force. The 104th Pennsylvania, Col Davis, and the 52d Pennsylvania, Colonel Dodge, constituted the advanced guard. Besides those in the advance, there were engaged the 8th Pa. Cavalry, Col. Gregg, and Battery H, 1st N. York artillery, commanded by Capt. Spratt. The advance was made to the right and left of the old stage-coach road leading to Richmond, companies from the two advanced regiments being deployed as skirmishers through the woods on either side, as also companies from the 8th Pennsylvania cavalry, who acted conjointly with the infantry skirmishers from the same regiments, advanced in front, and a short distance behind these followed the battery alluded to and a strong infantry reserve.

Atabout ten o'clock the command was halted b Gan. Naglee, a short distance this side Mr. Higgins' house, behind which the Rebels had two batteries planted, from one of which guns commenced to play on us as we advanced. Our battery was immediately got into position. The 104th Pennsylvania occupied the left of the road, covered by a dense woods, while the 52d Pennsylvania were stationed on the right, similarly protected. The firing was opened by the Recels with shell, to which our guns replied by a quick and rapid discharge of grape and shell. The shots of the rebels tell far wide of the mark, while their shells, in many cases, did not explode at all, or exploded in the air. On our own side the shells were thrown with remarkable accuracy. and exploded just in the nick of time, doing great havoc among the rebeis. The force of the rebeis was composed of 500 of Stewart's old cavairy and a regiment of Tennessee infantry, together with the two batteries named, comprising eight or ten guns. Our cavairy at one time made a charge upon that of the rebels, in which we completely routed them, with severe loss, a number of them being seen to relax their hold on the bridles of the horses, which were subsequently led away by the comrades of the wounded. Sharp skirmishing also took place between the 104th Pennsylvania regiment and the Tennessee regiment, which was deadly in its effect upon the rebel force. .

About an hour after the firing of the first mu ket, the morning was occupied by an exchange of shots between the artillery force on either side. the Rebels shifting their guns from one point to the other, just as often as they were driven from the post occupied by them by the accuracy of our fire. Finally, unable to maintain their position any longer, the enemy's guns were moved to the right and out of sight.

Our skirmishers were again advanced, and cavalry and infantry deployed through the woods, who drove in the rebel pickets as rapidly as they were met. These being halted at intervals, our battery was again advanced, and shell, in the way of "feelers," were distributed with a l be al hand through the woods on all sides. Finally, it being reported that the rebel troops could not be found for a distance of several miles beyond, the reconneissance was halted for the day. At this time the rain was falling in torrents, the soldiers were standing in mild and water up to their shoe tops, and most, if not all of them, were drenched to the skin.

The ground where the fight occurred was of marshy character, over which the troops moved with the greatest difficulty. The retreat of the rebels was made to the right, on the railroad, where their principal force appears to be concen-

All the houses in the vicinity of the Pines have been vacated, several of which were left by the occupants during the progress of the fight. The spproaches to Richtmond from this point, and seven below it, are by four roads, over which the Rebels made their recent retreat to Richtmond.

The loss in killed and wounded, on our side, is far less than was anticipated, while that of the Rebels must have been heavy.

Letter frem Manchester, near Richmond. [Correspondence Philadelphia Inquirer.]

MANCHESTER, SIX MILES FROM RICHMOND, Sunday, May 25.—Te-day has been the most quiet Sabbath of any we have spent in the army. The advance still holds their position here, while the main body of the army is moving to sustain us. The enemy have a large force in front of us, and are said, by contrabands, to be pouring over reinforcements from across the James river and from the Southwest.

We cannot move much further without going o Richmond, or under cover of their batteries, at he race-course They made a feint to-day, as though they were going to make an attack on our left, some five miles below here, but the balloon found it to be only a ruse, and so it was regarded. We now hold the Chickshominy from here to below Bottom Bridge, making a front to our column of fifteen miles. There is much that would be interesting, but it is contraband, and though others may violate the parole of Col Sanford, we decline. It rained all day Saturday, making the roads very bad, but the sun shines now quite pleasantly, and they will soon be in good condition again. Do not look for a big battle for some time here
